A video surveillance system with an integrated video analysis function. It is possible to quickly retrieve important data from hours of stored video and receive notifications whenever it is necessary, for optimal security levels 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. In addition to advanced automatic intrusion detection with fast notification, these cameras can collect statistical data that is relevant for the company, such as the number of people entering and exiting, as well as the number present at a certain moment. The video data can therefore also be used to guarantee the application of regulations on health and safety, improve service levels thanks to the issue of automatic notifications if the number of people in a queue exceeds a certain threshold, or identify models of customer activity.
